HONGKONG, JANUARY 8TH, 1891.

At the last meeting of the British Mercants' Marine Officers' Association of Hongkong the President, Captain Ashton, referred to the "Marine piracy," and, while not blaming any individual for the want of prompt action, he said—"We can and do blame a system which is so utterly incapable of making apparently even an attempt to capture seafarers of the type of those concerned in this affair." It must be confessed that the system, judged by its results, is extremely defective. That the pirates should escape is, perhaps, not so surprising, but that such a crime as the attack on the Namou should be successfully arranged in the Colony and all details of preparation—including the acquisition of arms carried out without interruption of any kind, shows that wrong does possess a freedom of action which certainly does not reflect credit on the Government of the colony. After the dreadful experience of the Namou tragedy on the subject of piracy addressed to the Throne by CHANG CHUN-TUNG, acquires a new force.

or residents in this Colony and might with advantage be punished by the Government and the unofficial members of Council, who it may be remembered, opposed Sir William Das-Vaux's scheme for facilitating the rendition of criminals who take refuge in Hongkong after committing crimes on the mainland. In the translation of the memorial referred to the following passage occurs:

"—The memorialist asserts that his great difficulty in dealing with pirates arises from their establishing themselves in Hongkong and Macao, where they are formed into associations under regular chiefs. They collect blackmail in all unprotected places along the coast, and at times carry off wealthy persons, from whom they extract immense sums as ransom.
Thus they have funds, with which they bribe the police, provide themselves with arms and even pay compensation to the families of such of their crew as are killed. They are able to maintain a permanent organization, and they cannot be prevented from obtaining arms, vessels, and supplies." His Excellency, thus indulges in further description, and declares that things are worse now than they were five years ago. At the time the memorial was published we characterized the latter statement as an exaggeration and suggested that the picture had been coloured by the memorialist's antipathy to this Colony and Macao.
This was, however, specially selected by our London House, and bought direct from the most noted Shippers, and imported in wood and bottle by ourselves, thus enabling us to supply the best growth at moderate prices.

CHANG CHUN-TUNG, acquires a new force.

As will be seen from a memorandum in another part of the "Daily Beaver," Brothers instead of the Chinese, probably performance at the Farrington Hall on Saturday afternoon last. After the unanimous acknowledgement of the success of the Chinese, the authorities have decided to make a trial of the Chinese, and have appointed a committee to consider the matter.

From the "Farrington Echo" we learn that the authorities at that port have issued a proclamation revising the laws against Christianity. Two of the men employed by the authors of the memorial to the Chinese, the Rev. Mr. Das-Vaux and Mr. J. N. Sargent, have been arrested and are now in prison.
